In this project about pollution we wanted to represent two visions of the world so we decided, first of all, to draw two eyes.

The eye on the left cries oil and represents smog and traffic while the eye on the right contains an image of a not polluted landscape.

Above the left eye there is a dark city; above the right eye there are some wind turbines which represent renewable energy.

Between the two eyes we drew one hand which tears the paper and reveals an ideal world with the sun in a blue sky.

We used acrylic colors to represent the ideal future with a bright blue sky.

We drew the dark city with charcoals to represent smog and pollution.

We chose this theme because we wanted to represent the ideal future for us.

This is why our favourite part of our eco-art work is the hand which tears the paper as it shows the world we would like to live in.
